Annual Report 2003

Communication objectives

This Annual Report reviews The University of Queensland’s performance in 2003 and flags our plans for the future. It answers the interests of our diverse stakeholders by documenting our progress against the aims, aspirations and commitments stated in our five-year Strategic Plan 2003-2007.

The Report outlines our operational framework and describes the highlights of our teaching and research year. It reflects our role in the community and demonstrates our efficient stewardship of public resources.

Users of this Report include members of State Parliament, members of the public, the University community (academics, administrators and students), business and media communities, benefactors and others such as Australian and international visitors, and prospective staff and students.

They will find the Report describes a range of initiatives, achievements and future plans—a sound basis for measuring our performance in 2003 and our prospects as a leader among Australia’s 39 universities.
