Editorial

This first issue of Crossroads fulfils the journal's aim to present the reader with an interdisciplinary selection of articles blind-reviewed by academics in the relevant fields. Topics covered range from Biblical and Vedic texts to modern history and philosophy, and shows the diversity of research subjects to be found within the School of History, Philosophy, Religion and Classics. Our contributors range from final stages of undergraduate work to awaiting the results of their PhD submissions.

All reviewers are academics with no current staff affiliations with the University of Queensland. This makes our review process in line with those of general academic journals, giving authors the chance to experience the 'real' world of academic journal publication. The Editorial Board express their gratitude to these reviewers and to all those who have assisted with the publication of this journal.

We would also like to thank the authors who submitted for this initial issue. The Editorial Board welcome submissions throughout the year. Please consult the style guide and submit articles together with an abstract of 150 - 200 words and a biography of between 50 - 75 words to crossroads@uq.edu.au. Further details are available on the submission page on the website.

It has been a long and challenging road which has given all of us experience in areas that have been new to us and we are very happy with the results of our efforts. We hope you will be. We welcome your comments.
