This issue is a Special Issue dedicated to discussion of the work of the Australian philosopher, Max Deutscher. Max has kindly chosen Crossroads for the publication of four new articles, which no doubt will create future discussion.

This issue has been guest edited by Daniel Nicholls. Daniel has experienced the rigours of editing, and is still sane at the end of it. He has liaised with reviewers, and most particularly with copyright permissions.

Max’s article Remembering ‘Remembering’ has been reproduced with the kind permission of Springer SBM NL. The format of this article is different to our normal as Crossroads did not have access to an electronic copy and so have scanned the article. Due to copyright constraints those wishing to read this article must respond with a password. When the article title is clicked a password prompt will appear. Please enter the password: tis3hadj to gain access.

We hope that you enjoy this issue of Crossroads, and that it encourages some of you to submit your own articles to the journal.
