EDUC2049 YOUTH CULTURES AND ADOLESCENT DEVELOPMENT

Units 2
Mode Internal
Coordinator Dr Glenda McGregor
Info.education@uq.edu.au
Fee $450 per unit

This course is intended to develop understandings of the experience, meaning and significance of youth in contemporary society. This subject queries assumptions about youth and interrogates the veracity of categorised identity. Moreover, it suggests the need to acknowledge the impact of recent technological, social and cultural changes upon previously accepted development stages of youth. Whilst interrogating traditional assumptions about the problematic nature of being a young person, this subject will explore the construction of youth through social processes and representations by the media. Developing an understanding of the positioning of youth in contemporary society should be useful to those planning a variety of careers centred upon work with young people.

Duration and contact hours

Course will be offered intensively over the summer. Please contact the School of Education for timetable details.

Workload expectations and assessment

Seminar, case study, participation and tutorial activities and research paper. Assessment 1. Tutorial attendance/participation (10%) 2. Tutorial seminar (30%) 3. Case study (20%) 4. Research paper 1500–2000 words (40%).
